Many persons who have sent in cash contributions have given directions that the money be not spent for rent.

What Col. Tracey Says.

Col. Tracey superintendent of charities, said to a Star reporter this morning that the contributions were coming in fairly well, although, he said, the committee needed considerable more money than it is collecting. At present, he said, the principal demands are for fuel. Col. Tracey said he thought there were very few cases of imposition thus far, although, of course, he knows that such a thing cannot be entirely prevented. One of the best features of the charity work, he thinks, is the 10-cent meal arrangement of the Central Union Mission.

About 5,000 tickets have been put out and the distribution of them is giving street beggars a charity which they cannot well misuse. The work of the neighborhood committees he finds extremely useful, not only the cause of the reliable information they gather. These committees information they walked the assembled statesmen has proposition and been made to Senator Ingalls which would land him in the Senate for six years more, at the nominal expense of only $17,000, and that he had indignantly declined to consider it, a pail fell over the row and for a moment there was a death-like stillers.

Several close friends of Ingalls, who were present, did not believe Buchan and adollar for a re-election. This stopped the negotiations with Wood and all hope of re-electing Ingalls was abandoned.

There is another before him, but he was firm and protested that the would not pay a dollar for a re-election. This stopped the negotiations with Wood and all hope of re-electing Ingalls was abandoned.

There is another before him, but he was firm and probably never have been known but f 's said to a Star reporter this morning that the

He said he thought there were fully ten cords of this wood about the building and he thought it could be used to advantage by the committee. As it is the wood is rotting and will eventually have to be carted away Attempt to Burn Cougressman Baldwin in Effigy Causes a Fight.

Mr. Mushback refused to talk on the subject for publication, but he is, no doubt, framing a bill, under the guidance and with the co-operation of Gov. O'Ferrall. Both of these men have reputations for their fearless, untiring and unrelenting dispositions when a fight is once undertaken by them when a fight is once undertaken by them, and a law even more rigid and far-reaching than that now in operation in Missouri will probably be enacted at this session of the assembly.

The great obstacle in the way of the

The great obstacle in the way of the O'Ferrall-Mushback movement is the constitution. Of course, they must frame a constitutional measure, for otherwise it would fall to pieces before the federal courts. This is the condition which now confronts them and they are earnestly studying the question. There is no question about the passage of the measure, no matter how revolutionary, by the present assembly. It is decidedly an "anti-vice" body theoretically, and a bill to break up Jackson City or any other like resort would go through both branches with a whoop, and some pyrotechnic oratory besides.

REFUSED TO BUY OFFICE. The Story Told of John J. Ingalls'

WANTED (Miscellane

Correspondence of The Evening Star. TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 26, 1894. The announcement of four candidates for the United States Senate in the republican party has caused the friends of ex-Senator John J. Ingalls to use his name as a probable aspirant for the seat of Senator Martin. Until recently it was thought the fight in the republican camp would waged between ex-Senator Perkins, J. W. Ceely, J. R. Burton and Judge J. B. Johnson. Recently, however, the names of Chief Justice Horton and ex-Senator Ingalls have been suggested, and it is probable that one or two others will also become candi-

Defeat for the Senate.

'The mention of Ingalis' name has revived an old story connected with his downfall in 1891, in which J. R. Burton's name figures conspicuously. When Ingalls' chief manager, State Senator Buchan, then chairman of the state control committee, was making a heroic effort to re-elect Ingalis. the greatest stumbling block in his way was a lack of seventeen votes. He was short this number. As the story runs, he rorized southwestern Kansas for years, and discussed the situation with him. To reelect Ingalis it was necessary to secure seventeen populist votes. Wood being a thrifty politician, said he would look around and see what he could do. After two days' absence in the populist camp Wood returned and made his report to Buchan. He said he had looked the ground over and was able to state that the seventeen populist votes could be had for $17,000, $1,000 each. This was the best he could do.

Then it was that a grave and solemn keep Burton out of the United States Senate?"

The problem was solved in some way, and the explanation made seems to be satisfactory to the politicians. While Buchan and Burton decline to talk about it, the story is going the rounds that when Ingalls refused to negotiate for the seventeen populist members of the house at $1.000 per head. Burton went to Sam Wood and agreed to take them. It is related that Wood at once entered into the deal, but the next thing was to get the republican members who were standing firm for Ingalls. The plan was laid before Buchan, and he refused to consider such a proposition, and gave Burton to understand that he never could get the republican votes. Burton felt sure of the seventeen populists, but when it came to getting about sixty republicans, Ingalis' manager, Buchan, stood like a stone wall in the way of consummating the deal.

As Kansas politicians have it, this is the As Kansas politicians have it, this is the reason J. R. Burton is not now occupying a seat in the Senate, instead of Willam A. Peffer.
